Yamatsu

Introduction:: Yamatsu

Background:

In 1598 the Korean Peninsula was taken over by Japan along with Korea's outermost territories of Manchuria. This led to the formation of the Koreo-Japanese Empire and which would manage to expand into the Kuril Islands, Mongolia, Sakhalin, Hokkaido, the Ryukyu Islands, and Taiwan. As the Empire came into contact with the Spanish owned Philippines and French owned Indochina, the isolationist mindset spread like wildfire across the Empire when exposed to (what they saw as) the Barbaric Cultures of Europeans. The Empire was blocked off from other nations, however slowly crept around the European Colonies into Thailand, Myanmar, and Malaysia. During this time literacy, life expectancy, and the fertility rate grew at a rapid pace as the empire remained stable and did not expand for a long time. However in 1620 the Empire went to war with the Netherlands over the large and resource heavy islands of Indonesia. The Empire eventually won the war, and managed to keep out various other empires from the islands, while also giving the Empire a monopoly on various resources throughout Asia, giving them the ability to cut other countries off from resources, manipulating it's way through the global economy. The Message being given by the Empire was clear: "We are strong." By 1877 the Empire had made it's way to Hawaii, and colonized the islands along with various other Oceanic Islands along the way. The Empire settled down in 1904 with the complete colonization of Hong Kong, Macau, Bangladesh, and Sri Lanka and decided to begin to build up it's infrastructure. During this time a period known as the "Bay Miracle" occurred in which the various cities along bays and coasts thrived. In 2018, with the freedom of Indochina from France and the Philippines from Spain, the two joined the Empire hand in hand. In 2021 the Empire was renamed from "The Great East Asian Empire" to "Yamatsu" after the Japanese words "Yama" and "Tsuki." In 2022 the nations of Tibet, Bhutan, and Nepal were democratically joined with Yamatsu. During this time Yamatsu's infrastructure, education, population, and economy boomed in an era known as "The Fourth Golden Era." This period continued for the next 8 years, however eventually independence movements in the Capital City of Tokyo Emerged, leading to recession once Tokyo Seceded from the Nation. After this the Japanese Capital was moved to Kyoto (this Historical Capital of Japan) and the National Capital moved around for the next five years to Manila, Hong Kong, Jakarta, Harbin, and eventually landing on Seoul in a referendum in 2035. After this time another age of huge progress continued as the country experienced a dramatic decline in infant mortality, homeless rates, and rates of obesity and illness. By 2040 the nation had set a standard for Social Welfare and was a sign that Asia could be powerful like the Europeans and Africans. Today the nation is a Centre-Left Leaning State with billions of residents. It is a leader in Education, Infrastructure, and in Clean-Efficient Energy.
